BEEF PRODUCTION IN STATE OF GEORGIA

Extract From Excellent Article Advocating Same.

FARMER SHOULD SUCCEED WELL

Less Drudgery in Raising Stock Than in Clerking in a Bank or Selling Groceries and Dry Goods, and the Profits are Sure.

We wish to give here an extract from an article on beef production in Georgia by Professor C. C. Williams, of the Georgia Experiment Station, which appears in the November number of the Southern Farm Magazine. "I am convinced that the average white farmer in Georgia has plenty of intelligence to succeed with stock, if he will turn his mind to it, and secure good help, for I must admit the negro shows very little aptitude in this line. He does well enough raising the mule, because neither as a team nor as a hulk, he is so much of a hindrance to the other, but the black who shows ability in raising cattle are so few and far between that it is impossible to depend upon them without close personal supervision. The best plan is for the farmer to take hold of this matter himself. There is less drudgery in it than clerking in a bank or dealing out groceries and calico, and the profits are as certain as in cotton growing. Banks and merchants will furnish money and supplies just as readily with cattle for security as the same number of acres in cotton. The question of men for the work, therefore, resolves itself into a question of whether the Georgia farmer will see his opportunity and make the effort to take advantage of it."

SEVENTH LETTER ON AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY.

Continuing the Letters of State Chemist to Georgia Farmers on Agricultural Chemistry—Description of Fertilizer Materials.

Cotton, seed meal, blood, tankage, etc., which I have described to you in the last letter, are known as "organic" sources of ammonia, or rather of nitrogen. Hark! is so strong, you see, it is hard to get rid of the use of that word ammonia. Nitrogen is much the better term for our use. Besides the organic sources of nitrogen we also have what are known as the "inorganic" sources. I have explained in a previous letter fully the meaning of these two terms, but lest you may have forgotten, I will stop a moment to say that an organic substance may be either vegetable or animal, thus a leaf, a seed, a piece of meat or of skin are organic substances. An inorganic substance is the opposite of these, and is mineral in its nature, a piece of rock or of iron, for instance. The chief inorganic source of nitrogen, then, is nitrate of soda, also commonly called "Chili Saltpetre;" caliche, because it has many of the properties of real saltpetre, which is nitrate of potash, and Chili because it is imported from Chili in South America. Nitrate of potash or true saltpetre is a very valuable fertilizing compound, yielding both nitrogen and potash to the plant, but it is much too expensive to buy in this form; it is, therefore, better, or rather cheaper, to buy a nitrate of soda and nitrate of potash separately, and then mix them together, when we will accomplish practically the same result from a fertilizing standpoint, and for a smaller outlay of money, than if we bought the same elements in form of nitrate of potash. Nitrate of soda is such an important salt for fertilizer purposes that I will go into some little detail about it.

The entire supply at present comes from the western coast of Chili. It extends in a narrow strip of land running north and south for about 250 miles, at an average distance of about 14 miles from the ocean. The country where it is found is a desert, it never rains there and the whole region is bare of vegetation and destitute of water. The nitrate rock is called "nitrato" (pronounced Cal-ee-chay) and the best quality has the following composition: Sodium nitrate, 50 per cent, sodium chloride 26 per cent, sodium sulphate 6 per cent, magnesium sulphate 3 per cent, insoluble matter 14 per cent, sodium iodate, sodium nitrite, magnesium chloride, magnesium nitrate, potassium chloride 1 per cent making the whole.

The average quality of "caliche" contains from 30 to 40 per cent of sodium nitrate, and the poorest quality works ranges from 12 to 20 per cent sodium nitrate. The "caliche" occurs from 6 to 10 feet below the surface of the ground, and the vein or stratum varies from a foot and a half to twelve feet in thickness.

The process of extracting and separating the valuable nitrate of soda from the rest of the "caliche" is done by means of water in which the nitrate of soda dissolves, and from which it is crystallized. A description of the process would be tedious. Suffice it to say that the costly plant required for the purpose, and that the work is so well done that the product when finished contains about 95 per cent nitrate of soda, which is equivalent to 15.65 per cent of nitrogen, or

Roosevelt strong in the west

There seems to be no opposition to Mr. Roosevelt in the West as the presidential candidate of his party next year. His party in a number of the states in that section has interest in him for the nomination and it will do so in other states. He got an enthusiastic endorsement from the Nebraska Republican convention on Tuesday. In fact, he has been endorsed by all of the Republican state conventions that have been held this year in the West.

Of course he feels certain of the nomination. Still, he does not like the idea of having so much opposition in New York, his own state. There is no doubt of course that the delegation from New York will be in favor of him, but there may be enough opposition to him among Republicans there to cause him to lose the state.

It is true that the opposition is confined chiefly to Wall street, and to prominent business men in other parts of the state, but the Wall street influence is considerable. In this connection a story is told that may have some foundation. It is that the reason Mr. Root decided to leave the cabinet was that he might be in a position to help overcome the opposition among New York Republicans to Mr. Roosevelt. The plan is alleged to be to make Mr. Root the Republican nominee for Governor of New York at the next election with the view of nominating him for President in 1908.

Mr. Root isn't objectionable to those Republicans who are opposing Mr. Roosevelt. On the contrary, they feel very kindly towards him. That being the case, it is argued that he can be of great service in smoothing over the objections that is offered by Mr. Roosevelt.

There may be something in this alleged plan, but it is doubtful if it is so. If Mr. Root had remained in the cabinet he could, in all probability, have rendered Mr. Roosevelt as much assistance in New York as he can as a private citizen. Mr. Root determined to leave the cabinet because he saw doubtless that there was no more honor to be gained there. He wanted to return to his law practice. He had made a reputation in connection with army reforms that he might lose if he continued his connection with the administration.

There isn't any doubt that Mr. Roosevelt is going to be nominated, but it isn't so certain that he will be elected. He may lose New York, though his friends have published figures showing that he will be elected without that state. It is an easy matter to present figures of that kind. Unfortunately for those for whom they are made they are not always reliable. If Mr. Roosevelt were certain that he would lose New York he would be very uneasy about his election, notwithstanding the figures his friends have made.

Unless all signs fail powerful influences will be brought to bear by members of his party in New York to defeat him, provided the Democratic nominee is half-way satisfactory to them. The financiers and trust magnates are afraid of him. They think he is lacking in judgment. He is so erratic that they are in doubt all the time as to the course he will pursue in regard to matters pertaining to business. Their present purpose is not to contribute to his campaign fund. That fact is of much importance to him and his party.

It takes a great deal of money to carry on a presidential campaign. The men who have hitherto contributed largely to the Republican campaign funds are connected with Wall street.

Isam Rimes Dead.

On Friday night Mr. Isam Rimes died at his home about 12 miles from Statesboro. Mr. Rimes had been a sufferer from typhoid fever for several weeks. He was a son of Mr. John Rimes, a well-known citizen of this county.

The deceased was about 32 years old at the time of his death.

Infant's Death.

On Friday at the home of Mr. Walter Bland, near Adelphi, the two year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson died after a short illness.

Mimbs—Means.

Wednesday at the residence of Mr. J. A. Jackson in this city, Miss Lilla May Mimbs of Brooklyn, Bulloch county, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Means of Elko, Houston county. Rev. G. W. Mathews of the Dublin Methodist Church officiated. The young bride is a daughter of Rev. T. J. Mimbs of the South Georgia Conference of the Methodist Church. Recently she came to Dublin to visit the family of Mr. J. A. Jackson. Mr. Means was acquainted with the fact that she was in Dublin, and he immediately came to this city to claim his bride.—Ex.

COMMUNICATED.

Glenmore, Ga. Aug. 29, 1903. Mr. Editor Statesboro News, Dear Sir:

We beg for space in your valuable paper, to express our high appreciation of our teacher, Prof. L. M. Mikell, who we secured from your county.

We can, and do say, that Mr. Mikell has taught for us the most successful and beneficial schools in the history of the Pitman schools. We congratulate Bulloch on having such a young man in her bounds, and especially do we congratulate ourselves on securing him as our teacher.

During the three months Mr. Mikell stayed in this section, he lived a straight-forward life, a life of example, and we can truthfully say, that he has made this a better community by having been here. Mr. Mikell has not only been a successful literary teacher but has been a faithful worker in the Sunday school as well, and has developed moral character in this community that we hope that will never die.

In conclusion we wish him much success and may his path through life be strewn with flowers, and may God bless him as our worthy teacher.

Yours, the patrons of the Pitman Academy

R. C. Freeman Dead.

On Saturday morning after a severe and painful illness of fever Mr. R. C. Freeman died at the still of J. A. McDougald & Co., near this place.

Mr. Freeman was a native of South Carolina but had been living in Bulloch county about eight years. The deceased leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. The remains were interred at the town cemetery on Saturday afternoon, Revs. T. J. Cobb and J. S. McLemore conducting the funeral.

The widow and five children will leave in a few days for Pablo Beach, Fla. where they have relatives.

Mrs. B. Parish Dead.

On Sunday evening Mrs. Susan Parish died at her home at Metter after a long illness. Mrs. Parish was a Christian lady and leaves a large circle of friends and relatives to mourn her loss.

The remains were interred at the Lake church cemetery on yesterday morning. A large crowd of sorrowing friends were present to pay to her memory the last tribute of respect.

Isam Rimes Dead.

On Friday night Mr. Isam Rimes died at his home about 12 miles from Statesboro. Mr. Rimes had been a sufferer from typhoid fever for several weeks. He was a son of Mr. John Rimes, a well-known citizen of this county.

The deceased was about 32 years old at the time of his death.

Infant's Death.

On Friday at the home of Mr. Walter Bland, near Adelphi, the two year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson died after a short illness.

The remains were interred at the family burial ground on Saturday. We failed to learn the particulars of its death.

Mimbs—Means.

Wednesday at the residence of Mr. J. A. Jackson in this city, Miss Lilla May Mimbs of Brooklyn, Bulloch county, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Means of Elko, Houston county. Rev. G. W. Mathews of the Dublin Methodist Church officiated. The young bride is a daughter of Rev. T. J. Mimbs of the South Georgia Conference of the Methodist Church. Recently she came to Dublin to visit the family of Mr. J. A. Jackson. Mr. Means was acquainted with the fact that she was in Dublin, and he immediately came to this city to claim his bride.—Ex.

A Second Crop of Irish Potatoes.

A writer in The Peach Grower, a periodical published in Atlanta in the interest of the fruit growers and farmers, discusses the question of a second crop of Irish potatoes. Occasionally failures in the past have caused many of our farmers to fear to take the risk of planting this valuable crop. It is perhaps too late for planting this fall, but it might be well for the farmers of this county to think along the line, and while making tests on other products make one on this.

On the subject of a "Fall Crop Irish Potatoes," the writer says: A few failures should not prevent the general planting of potatoes in the fall. It is a good plan to plant some every year. I have occasionally seen potatoes planted in the fall that did not "make the seed that was planted." On the other hand, some of the best potatoes I ever saw were fall-grown.

Every farmer usually has enough unused potatoes from his spring crop to plant at least a small area. The cost is slight in case the crop is a failure, the benefits are great should the yield be a bountiful one.

The following instructions for planting second crop Irish potatoes is from The Southern Cultivator of July 15, 1902.

"For second crop potatoes, a good way to plant is as follows: Lay off the rows two or three feet apart with a good plow, run a second furrow in the first, drop the potatoes in the bottom of these furrows, and cover with a sub-soiler with two furrows. After the plants have come up, then break out the ridge, and cultivate as often as necessary. If you have any kind of coarse manure or woods mould, scatter it on top of the potatoes before covering. This method will prepare the land cheap and cultivate the crops with fewer furrows than any we have tried."

"The Lookout Mountain is especially adapted to this time of the year, but several other varieties will do about as well, the Triumph being very fine for fall planting. Any time from the latter part of July to the middle of August if good for planting." —Dublin Times.

Steer clear of dirt, debt and the devil, and you are safe.

The man who refuses to work, and take care of things, can't succeed on the farm nor anywhere else.

Reforms move slowly but they get there after awhile. The people will win sooner or later.

The farmer who is building up his land is laying aside a bank account, that will count in the future.

Farming is now the best business there is, and with good roads the farmers will certainly be in it.

There has been consternation among the vagrants for some time in Georgia. The papers state that there are more cotton pickers now than ever before in the history of the state. Some of the towns that showed up a big population in the census returns have almost been depopulated since the Calvin act went into effect.

The man who successfully bosses himself has his hands full, without undertaking to extend his dominion over others.

And now comes Bishop Candler, and reads the lynch act, and lectures John Temple Graves on the negro question, and says he don't care to live in a country, where there are no negroes. He will find plenty in Africa.

Some of our former turpentine operators, who went to Alabama, and other Gulf states a few years ago, and engaged in naval stores and lumber, have become regular nabobs of wealth.

Good roads do more to advance the value of lands, make life pleasant to the farmers, than most any other improvement. Let us have good roads and begin now.

The diamond queen had to hoe cotton, and a howl went up from the sentimentalists, and yet thousands of good Georgia women of respectability hoe cotton every year. Verily, the criminal is the subject of foolish sympathy.

No Place Like Bulloch.

Mr. F. P. Register, while in Statesboro one day this week, informs us that it is his intention to move back to Bulloch after he has worked turpentine a year or two in Florida. Mr. Register regards "old Bulloch" as the best place on earth to settle down and make a home for life. He has a handsome residence at Register, a town named in his honor and one founded by him. He still owns considerable property in and near that place.

Mr. Register says he has one of the very best Naval Stores location in Florida, and he along with all Naval Stores operators is making money. He thinks his section of Florida a good place to make money in the Naval Stores business, but when it comes to a good place to live and have peace and comfort for the balance of his life and Bulloch county is the place, and Mr. Register wasn't raised here either.

CARD OF THANKS.

I take this method of expressing my sincere thanks to the good people of my community for the many kind words and acts extended me during my recent misfortunes.

Stillmore's Solid Boom.

The News representative was in Stillmore a short time a few nights ago. We were there only a short time waiting for a railroad connection, but during our short stay the improvements since our last visit, a month or two ago, are so marked as to excite considerable comment. A new brick block of stores have just been completed. One of them now being filled with a large stock of goods, by Mr. Geo. M. Brinson, would do credit to a city four times as large as Stillmore. A large force of men were busy opening up one of the prettiest lines of new, fall goods it has been our privilege to notice. In the same block is the prettiest Drug store in the entire section, run by Dr. Youmans. Mr. J. L. Martin, another successful business man of the town, has lately moved into a neat brick store in this block and has a pretty stock. Altogether we believe Stillmore is on a solid boom.

Here is what a hat dealer has to say about hats:—
"I sell hats all over the United States and I find that heads run bigger in the west than anywhere else. The Chicago man has the biggest head in America. The Southern man has the smallest. We customers—Philadelphia, New York and Bostonians—all have hats about the same size. That the 58, on the average, 7. The Westerner's size is 7 1-4; the southerner's is 6 3/4."—Philadelphia Record.

Our consolation comes from this statement. Folks can't say that the southerner people have got the big head.—Pine Forest.

I have in stock a large line of prints, clothing, hats, dry goods, etc. that I must close out in a limited time at a sacrifice. If you want a bargain in these articles, see me.

Death Claims Mrs. Minnie Rountree.

After an illness of fifty days with typhoid fever, Mrs. Minnie Rountree died on Wednesday, at her father's home near Emit. She was the daughter of Capt. S. H. Kennedy, and only a few months ago was happily married to Mr. Perry Rountree, a prominent young man of Metter. Miss Minnie spent a year or two in Statesboro, and was admired and loved by all who knew her and they learn with sadness, of her death, and extend to her loved ones their sympathy.

The Fight Against Intemperance.

The battle keeps right on, through fair and ill weather, with success here, and failure there; but it keeps right on—as all battles for the right must, until the right shall win, which is one of the sustaining hopes of those who believe in God. Some of the facts concerning the strength of the saloon, and the localities where it abounds, are worth serious consideration. Alonzo Wilson, a leading prohibitionist, reports that there are more saloons in the state of New York than in all the states south of the Ohio River and Pennsylvania, including Arkansas and Louisiana. On this report the New York "Evening Post" says: "There is reason to believe that the statement is true, as prohibition, under local option laws, has been gaining rapidly in the south. Two reasons are assigned for this rapid closing of the saloon—one, the increasing feeling that liquor must be kept away from the disreputable Negro movement thus being one of self-protection on the part of the whites; the other, that prohibition sentiment receives practical expression, because in the supremacy of one political party the saloon interests cannot trade one party off against another." Whatever may be the reason for this state of things, the southern part of the country is to be congratulated upon the gradual removal of this curse. In this connection we may refer to the address of Mr. John G. Woolley, at Chautauque, New York, a few weeks ago. It was, as usual, a strong plea for the prohibition party, and the things for which it stands. His words concerning the saloon will find a hearty echo in every true heart: "The beverage liquor business ought to die; no matter where it is done; no matter how it is done; no matter what it pays; no matter how long it takes to kill it; no matter how hard it dies; no matter what it pulls down with it when it dies; it ought to die. This is not fanaticism; it is the accepted theory. It is nearly unanimous as any social proposition of the present time."—Ex.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for over thirty years, during which time many millions of bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and relied upon in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as a child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all Druggists.

Shipping To Mississippi.

That Statesboro spreads out occasionally is evidenced by the fact that one of our large firms shipped last week 2 or 3 wagons, one or two buggies and a pair of autos to Woolmarket Miss. These goods were bought here because they could be purchased at advantage. They were bought by Mr. Henry Johnson formerly of this county but now in the naval stores business at Woolmarket Miss. and were sold by Messrs J. W. Olliff & Co. of this city. Mr. Johnson together with his wife returned to Mississippi on yesterday after a visit of several weeks in Bulloch.
